Art Furnishings for Artful Living

October 9, 2013

Dear Friend,

I hope this finds you well and you are enjoying the fall weather. Colors are at peak here in NH, and at the moment skies are clear. It's great.

I'm looking forward to the upcoming NH Furniture Masters gala (click the link for more info) at the Wentworth by the Sea, October 27 in Newcastle. I hope lots you who are local will join us at that event. I'm working away on the plant stand and will have it ready for display then, so if you've been following it's progress, do come see the finished item. Also, an early heads up. The artists in my building are planning an open house for December 13, so again, if you are local please save the date.

The plant stand in tranformation

Here are some photos of the plant stand as assembly and carving are progressing. Remember that my first idea was that it should be a gardener, but it seemed to want to be a musician.

You see how the shape of the structure suggested a guitar in the first two photos. The face is very much Picasso inspired, as is the whole thing, with a merged profile and full view. I made a clay model before carving. We'll see as I carve how it develops, but I'd like it to be male/female, happy/sad, too.

I hope you are enjoying seeing this project progress. And at risk of "banging on a tea kettle," do come to the Wentworth on the 27th, and bring your friends.

Sincerely,

Jeffrey
